Horticulture Internship - 2010 Season

Greenwood Gardens invites individuals to apply for a horticultural internship.

Greenwood Gardens is a 28-acre public garden in Short Hills, New Jersey, recognized as nationally significant for its beauty, history, and design. The landscape combines formal gardens, open meadows, woodlands, and pasture. Greenwood Gardens is underway with the Phase One Restoration to revive elements of the century-old gardens to their 1920s splendor. The project completes Greenwood's transformation from a private retreat to a public garden, providing necessary visitor amenities including safe walking paths for visitors, handicapped accessibility, and public restrooms and parking.

This internship at Greenwood Gardens is designed to augment the horticultural education and/or training of a student through hands-on experience. A qualified candidate will be pursuing a career in Horticulture, be able bodied, hard working and expected to lift 50 pounds. The individual will have the opportunity to learn about many aspects of public horticulture and to work side by side with knowledgeable horticulturists, as well as independently, in all areas of the garden.

Responsibilities

Specific responsibilities include planting and maintenance of perennial beds and container plants, transplanting trees and shrubs, use of power equipment (following training), weeding and mulching, lawn maintenance, IPM, botanical record keeping, and assisting with public events, tours and workshops.
